(F) The Novel

Answer the following questions:

1. Manolin learns that patience and strategy are important, and sometimes it is wiser to let difficulties weaken over time instead of fighting them with force.
2. Santiago's calm reaction shows his experience and wisdom, as he understands nature and knows that panic only makes situations worse.
3. Teaching gives Santiago purpose because it allows him to pass on his experience and knowledge, making him feel useful and valued.
4. The boy sharing the dream shows their strong bond and shared hope, symbolizing renewal and optimism for the future.

Story

The Old Man and the Sea

Chapter (7) Exercises

Answer the following questions:

1. Manolin cries because he is heartbroken by the sight of Santiago's suffering and his torn, bleeding hands.
2. He carries the mast on his shoulders despite his exhaustion; it represents his endurance and his identity as a fisherman.
3. Yes, he was brave because he faced a giant fish alone for days and refused to give up despite his pain.
4. It means that while his body is physically destroyed, his will, dignity, and courage remain undefeated.
5. Santiago does not care about their pity or admiration because he knows he fought with honor.
6. He admires Santiago's wisdom, his incredible resilience, and the fact that he never stops fighting.

7. They are proud because Santiago proved that an old man from their village could catch a record-breaking fish.
8. He looks at it to acknowledge their shared struggle and to confirm that the battle was worth everything.
9. It remains as physical proof of his victory and the immense effort he put into the battle.
10. The skeleton is compared to a mast because its massive size makes it look like part of a great ship.
11. His simple and humble hut reflects his lonely, disciplined life and his focus on his craft over wealth.
12. It symbolizes the end of his suffering, the safety of home, and the relief of a successful return.
13. He is so completely exhausted that his body prioritizes recovery over food or even the ability to think.
14. He whispers "You were worth everything," showing his deep respect for the fish and the dignity the battle provided.
15. To Santiago, winning back his honor and proving his strength is more valuable than any money from selling meat.
16. This description creates respect by showing the former majesty of the fish and the noble struggle it endured.
17. At eighteen feet long, the skeleton proves that Santiago achieved something legendary and nearly impossible.
18. It is an enemy through sharks and storms, but a companion that gives his life meaning and purpose.
19. His cuts and swollen hands are the physical price he paid to prove his bravery and resilience.
20. The message is that a man can be destroyed by age or nature, but his spirit can never be defeated.

21. Their silence suggests a deep, newfound respect for Santiago's hard work and his incredible sacrifice.
22. It teaches us that achieving something truly great requires pushing oneself to the absolute limit of human strength.
23. Dreaming of young lions allows Santiago's mind to escape his aging body and feel young and strong again.

Chapter (8) Exercises

Answer the following questions:

1. Santiago says real strength is "not in the arms, boy. It is here," touching his chest.
2. The café owner speaks proudly because "He fought alone with the biggest fish we have ever seen. And though the sharks destroyed it, he came back with honor. No one else could have done it."
3. Manolin's eyes light up with excitement, saying "Yes, old man. Teach me everything. I want to know."
4. The fishermen gather to measure the skeleton with ropes and argue about how big the fish was before the sharks came.
5. They argue to determine how large the fish was before the sharks ate most of it, making it an extraordinary size.
6. Tourists see it as "a monster of the sea" while villagers "knew what kind of battle Santiago must have fought" and didn't laugh.
7. Tourists laugh because they don't understand the significance, while villagers respect Santiago's struggle.
8. The skeleton represents Santiago's transformation from "unlucky" to "brave, even heroic" in the villagers' eyes.
9. Manolin sits quietly because he's sad seeing Santiago's condition, as shown when he "shook his head with sadness" and looked at the old man's scarred hands.

10. Santiago's injured hands show the physical toll and sacrifice he made during his battle with the marlin and sharks.
11. Like Manolin, I would feel sadness and concern, wanting to help and ensure he's never alone again.
12. Manolin's promise is important because "the old fisherman would never face the sea alone again," ending his isolation.
13. Santiago worries because Manolin's father might not approve of his son fishing with an "unlucky" old man.
14. Santiago believes strength comes from the heart because his physical battle required inner determination and spirit to endure.
15. The village's opinion changes from mocking him as "unlucky" to calling him "brave, even heroic" after witnessing his incredible feat.
16. Santiago means the sea provides fish and livelihood (gives) but also takes lives and causes hardship (takes), testing fishermen's resilience.
17. The shared dream is important because it represents "strength and youth" and shows the passing of spirit from Santiago to Manolin.
18. Santiago wants to teach Manolin to prepare him for future challenges and pass on his knowledge and resilience.
19. As a tourist, I would shift from seeing just a "strange sight" to respecting the symbol of courage and determination.
20. The promise transforms Santiago's past loneliness from permanent to temporary, giving his struggles meaning and purpose.

Chapter (9) Exercises

Answer the following questions:

1. Manolin helps Santiago every morning out of love, respect, and guilt for letting him face the ordeal alone. He promised "Never again" and that Santiago would "not go alone anymore."

2. Villagers “nodded respectfully” and whispered, “There goes the old man who caught the great marlin,” showing they now view him with admiration instead of mockery.
3. Santiago means the sea is constant and indifferent—it offers opportunities and challenges regardless of human readiness, so fishermen must prepare and act when able.
4. His body is “still weak,” he moves “slowly,” and “leaned on the boy’s arm,” but his spirit is “stronger than before,” his “eyes shone with a new fire,” and he eagerly teaches and prepares for the future.
5. He teaches that proper preparation is essential: to face great challenges (“when the sea gives you a giant”), you need reliable tools that won’t fail you (“lines that will not betray you”).
6. Manolin watches carefully because he wants to absorb every skill and piece of wisdom Santiago possesses—to become a worthy fisherman himself.
7. It shows Manolin is dedicated, attentive, and capable—a serious apprentice honoring Santiago’s teaching through earnest practice.
8. He worries Santiago might feel loss or regret over losing the marlin’s flesh to sharks, not yet understanding that Santiago values the honorable struggle over material gain.
9. True worth isn’t measured by catch size but by courage, dignity, and perseverance in difficulty—“how he faces the sea” defines a fisherman’s character.
10. Helpful: stubbornness provides perseverance to endure hardship (“can carry you far”). Harmful: it can lead to isolation or refusing help, though Santiago now accepts companionship.

11. Santiago is still recovering physically and wants to focus on teaching Manolin gradually, not immediately seeking another great challenge.
12. Winning isn't bringing back meat; it's fighting "with all your heart." Even if sharks destroy the catch, the dignity of the struggle remains victorious.
13. To tourists it's a curiosity ("took pictures"); to fishermen proof of an extraordinary battle ("shook their heads in wonder"); to children a source of awe ("wide eyes"). Overall, evidence of heroic effort.
14. The lions symbolize youth, strength, and freedom. Sharing the dream shows the passing of spirit and hope from Santiago to Manolin—continuity beyond physical aging.
15. Strength of spirit—Santiago's body fails but his spirit remains "unbroken"; he teaches true strength resides internally ("not in the arms ... It is here," touching his chest).
16. He recognizes these knots contain hard-won wisdom from Santiago's lifetime of experience; he wants to honor that knowledge by mastering it completely.
17. Honored, determined, and reverent—learning from someone who proved extraordinary courage and wisdom despite age and hardship.
18. "The sharks took the flesh, but they cannot take the fight I gave." The struggle itself—his dignity, courage, and effort—remains undefeated and eternal.
19. The sea represents life itself: a force that "gives and tests," offering both opportunity and hardship, demanding respect, preparation, and courage.
20. Proud—because the skeleton proves an honorable battle fought with dignity; physical loss matters less than spiritual victory.

21. Humility—he sees his perseverance as simple stubbornness rather than heroism, though this “stubbornness” is actually profound inner strength.
22. “A fisherman is not judged only by what he brings back. He is judged by how he faces the sea”—that dignity in struggle matters more than material success.

Chapter (10) Exercises

Answer the following questions:

1. Santiago chooses to take Manolin because he no longer wants to be alone and feels it is time to teach the boy the lessons of the sea.
2. The calm sea suggests a peaceful, “golden” start to the journey, allowing for a focused day of practice.
3. He focuses on practice because he wants the boy to learn properly and gain confidence rather than just focusing on the size of the catch.
4. Manolin shows he has learned by preparing the lines with quick, confident movements and by following Santiago’s technical advice to tire out the fish.
5. Manolin would likely feel immense pride and a boost in self-confidence after being praised by an experienced master.
6. He teaches him to watch the birds because they act as “helpers” that indicate when fish are near the surface.
7. Patience is important because the sea is unpredictable, and acting too quickly can lead to losing a catch or making foolish mistakes.
8. He warns him not to hurry so that the fish has time to tire itself out, ensuring it can be landed safely.
9. He feels proud because the tuna represents the first successful, independent application of the skills he learned from Santiago.

10. The most important lesson is to “listen to the sea” and respect its power and changing moods.
11. The stories help Manolin by providing him with real-world examples of resilience, danger, and survival from Santiago’s long career.
12. He talks about danger to ensure Manolin respects the sea’s power and understands that success is not guaranteed.
13. The larger fish represents a rite of passage where Manolin must use his strength wisely and apply his training under pressure.
14. Manolin would likely feel worried by the waves but secure in seeing Santiago’s steady hands guiding the boat.
15. He is calm because his years of experience have taught him to respect the sea’s power rather than fear its moods.
16. They are impressed because they notice that Santiago is no longer alone, signifying a renewed sense of community and partnership.
17. Fishing together brings Santiago companionship and changes his dreams to include a “younger lion,” symbolizing new life and hope.
18. It means observing the natural signs around you, like birds and wind, and adapting your actions to the environment.
19. The most memorable moment would likely be when Santiago places his hand on Manolin’s shoulder and tells him he did well.
20. The gentle sunrise suggests a hopeful and auspicious beginning to their shared journey.

Chapter (11) Exercises

Answer the following questions:

1. Manolin enjoys the lion story because it connects him to Santiago's youth, strength, and freedom—qualities he admires and hopes to inherit. The lions symbolize the spirit he wants to carry forward.
2. I would feel honored and inspired—listening to a wise elder share memories that reveal his inner strength and dreams, knowing he trusts me with his most meaningful stories.
3. The calm sea represents peace after struggle, renewal, and the possibility of teaching and growth—contrasting with the violent sea of Santiago's battle with the marlin.
4. Anger leads to rash mistakes; patience allows a fisherman to read the sea and the fish, conserving strength and making wise decisions during the struggle.
5. Manolin stays calm because he remembers Santiago's teaching: "Do not fight the sea with anger. Fight with patience." He applies the lesson in the moment.
6. That true fishing—and true living—requires patience, respect for the sea, and calm focus rather than force or emotion.
7. Small catches let Manolin practice technique, build confidence, and learn sea rhythms safely before facing greater challenges—Santiago knows "the boy must first learn the sea step by step."
8. External battles (with fish or sharks) test you, but the deeper struggle is overcoming your own fear, doubt, and weakness—what defines your character.
9. Santiago teaches by doing, not just speaking—he demonstrates knots, patience, and respect for the sea while explaining the "why" behind each action.

10. I would see Santiago not as a defeated old man but as a respected teacher whose spirit survived great hardship and now guides the next generation.
11. Hope shows that loss isn't final—Santiago's struggle gave meaning beyond the marlin's bones, inspiring renewal in himself and Manolin.
12. Because he returned with dignity, teaches with wisdom, and walks beside the boy—proving his spirit “had not been broken” despite physical defeat.
13. The lions symbolize renewal, continuity, and legacy—the passing of strength and spirit from Santiago to Manolin, ensuring courage lives beyond one lifetime.
14. That Manolin fought “like a fisherman”—with patience and respect—not just catching a fish, but embodying the values Santiago tried to teach.
15. Through stories (lions), actions (teaching knots and patience), and shared experience (fishing together), Santiago gives Manolin not just skills but dignity, courage, and a vision of inner strength.

Chapter (12) Exercises

Answer the following questions:

1. Villagers keep visiting because the skeleton is extraordinary evidence of Santiago's courage—“long white bones shining in the sun” that inspire “disbelief” and whispered admiration.
2. The skeleton symbolizes extraordinary courage and achievement—the physical proof of a battle no one else could have fought, transforming Santiago from “unlucky” to respected.
3. Santiago prefers the sea's silence because he “did not seek their praise”; he finds meaning in the struggle itself and his connection with the sea, not in external validation.

4. Santiago shows humility by not seeking praise, calling himself “stubborn” rather than heroic, teaching quietly without boasting, and describing the sea as something that “teaches us humility.”
5. I would return to honor his courage, ensure he’s never alone again after his ordeal, and learn the deeper lessons about life he offers through fishing.
6. Learning from experience matters because Manolin gains not just skill but spirit through actual fishing—“These lessons were not only about fishing but about life itself.”
7. Santiago calls the sea a teacher because “The sea gives us food, tests our strength, and teaches us humility”—it shapes character through both generosity and hardship.
8. I would feel proud yet humble—my “arms burning with effort but heart filled with pride,” knowing I applied Santiago’s lessons of patience and respect.
9. Pride is positive here because it comes from earned accomplishment through perseverance, not arrogance—it reflects growth “in spirit,” not just catching fish.
10. Santiago watches silently to let Manolin experience his own success; his “eyes shining with quiet satisfaction” show he values the boy’s independent growth more than praise.
11. “A man is not defeated when he loses. He is defeated only when he gives up”—that dignity comes from perseverance, not material victory.
12. Hope transforms apparent defeat into renewal—Santiago’s struggle gives meaning beyond the lost marlin, ensuring his spirit lives on through Manolin: “It was not an ending. It was a new beginning.”

13. The lions connect them when Santiago dreams of the boy beside him watching the lions—"the lions were no longer only his. They belonged to the boy as well"—symbolizing shared spirit and legacy.
14. The story ends with renewal because Santiago's struggle wasn't wasted; it gave meaning, taught Manolin, and ensured his values would continue—"the promise of renewal."
15. Villagers react with "disbelief," whispered admiration for Santiago's courage, and later look at both the fish and "the boy, strong and determined, and at the old man ... full of quiet dignity."
16. Being a fisherman "in spirit" means possessing inner qualities—patience, courage, humility, and perseverance—not just physical skill: "Not just in your hands, but in your spirit."

6 Rewrite the following sentences using the words in brackets to give the same meaning:

1. Ahmed denied stealing my money.
2. He might have received my letter.

Story The Old Man and the Sea

Answer the following questions:

1. Santiago won because he caught the biggest fish of his life and proved his skill and courage. He lost because sharks ate the fish meat before he reached shore.
2. To Santiago, the skeleton is proof he really caught a great fish—it shows his fight was real and worthy. To others, it might just look like bones—something strange or useless.
3. He means the fight taught him about himself. It showed his courage, skill, and heart. Those things matter more than money or food.
4. Even when his hands bleed and his body aches, he keeps going. Real strength isn't about never hurting—it's about continuing when you're hurt.
5. Courage and pride matter more. You can't sell them, but they stay with you. They make you who you are. Things you sell disappear; inner strength stays forever.
6. Tourists laugh because they see only bones and don't understand fishing. Villagers know the sea. They see the skeleton's size and understand Santiago's great battle—even without the meat.
7. Manolin loves Santiago and respects him. He knows the old man's worth isn't about catching fish today—it's about wisdom, heart, and friendship. That matters more than his father's anger.
8. Fishing together shows their bond is unbroken. It means hope, learning, and care. The old man isn't alone anymore—and the boy is ready to learn again.

9. With someone beside you, hard times feel lighter. You share joy, pain, and purpose. Alone, you carry everything yourself. Together, you carry it side by side.
10. He shares stories to pass on wisdom—what he learned from life. Old people can teach patience, respect for nature, and how to face hard times with dignity.
11. Working hard means using all your power right away. Working smart means saving strength for when you really need it—like a fisherman who waits for the right moment to pull the line. Wisdom guides strength.
12. The lions represent youth, strength, and freedom. They come back because deep down, Santiago still feels strong and alive—even when his body is old. The dreams remind him of who he truly is inside.
13. What really matters isn't money or catching fish. It's courage, dignity, love, and never giving up. The things inside you—your heart and spirit—matter more than what you bring home.
14. Yes. Losing a fight doesn't make you a loser. Giving up does. Santiago lost the fish meat, but he never quit. That makes him a winner in what counts—his spirit.
15. Judge by effort. Struggles happen to everyone—some by bad luck. But effort shows character. How hard you try when things are tough tells who you really are.
16. Things that can't be taken: courage, pride, love, memories, wisdom, and respect. These live inside you. No shark, storm, or bad luck can steal them.
17. An unbroken spirit means you still believe in yourself. You still have hope. You may be tired or hurt, but your heart hasn't quit. You're ready to try again tomorrow.

18. Manolin brings Santiago food, covers him with a blanket, and promises to fish with him again. He shows that love isn't about success—it's about staying loyal to people you care about, especially when they're down.
19. Santiago sees the sea as alive—not just water. It can be kind or cruel, like a person. He respects it. He doesn't hate it when it takes his fish; he understands its nature.
20. To catch a fish, you must understand it—what it eats, when it sleeps, how it fights. Thinking like the fish means respecting your opponent and learning its ways.
21. The real battle isn't with the fish—it's with your own doubts. Can you keep going when your hands hurt? When you're hungry? When you're alone? That inner fight is the hardest—and the most important.
